C00111	R8 Political / Government	Lack of Long-term Commitment to Political Party Development	Uche Secondus critiques the culture of political opportunism, where individuals hop between parties without investing in long-term party development.	A political culture where leaders build and strengthen parties over decades. What Could Go Wrong? Political fragmentation and stunted party development.	Political actors treat parties as temporary platforms for elections.	Incentivize political loyalty, internal party growth mechanisms, and long-term vision planning.
