Dear Ros,

Thank you for confirmation that all parts of my letter have been received and duly noted. Such confirmation however, I shall take as empty rhetoric in consideration of your past record of failure to pass on important information. In this case your statement is redundant given that the intended recipients of the information were copied in my message.

Dear Sirs,

Following previous instances in which Croyde Bay Holidays have suppressed key information in effort to protect personal commercial interests, I consider it likely that my covering letter may be removed from the envelope posted, and destroyed before passing to you.

As the letter forms an integral part of the communication, please find it here attached.

Best Regards,
David Winter
